Knox City Council wins Premier's Sustainability Award

Bayswater District MP Heidi Victoria has commended Knox City Council for taking out the Premier's Community Award at the 2014 Sustainability Awards 2014 held last night.

Ms Victoria said the council won top honours for their Seedlings: Sustainability in the Early Years project.

"Knox City Council is leading by example and making our local area a cleaner and more liveable place to live and work," Ms Victoria said.

"I congratulate the Council for their early learning sustainability program that is helping our children learn about sustainability at an even earlier age which is helping build a better and more sustainable Victoria."

Minister for Environment and Climate Change Ryan Smith congratulated the winners and finalists across each of the awards' nine categories, saying that they represented Victoria's best and brightest sustainability leaders.

"These sustainability projects are further examples of how the Victorian Coalition Government is committed to supporting and inspiring Victorians to adopt sustainability measures in the workplace and at home," Mr Smith said.

The Premier's Sustainability Awards are Victoria's highest honours for sustainability and recognise excellence in a range of sectors, including small to large business, education, community, environmental protection and the development of innovative products and services.
