Share your vision for Melbourne

Heidi Victoria, MP for Bayswater is encouraging people to have their say on metropolitan planning in the next step towards a shared vision for Victoria.

This is an opportunity to share your ideas, so that Melbourne's future can be informed by a diverse range of possibilities. This will allow Victoria to continue to build on the best of past planning strategies and as well as bring fresh thinking to the consideration of growth, change and how we address those challenges moving forward.

"As we plan for Melbourne's future, it is important that all Victorians are given an opportunity to provide their ideas on how to build a better Victoria for all people," said Mrs Victoria.

"If you have a vision about how Melbourne should look in the future, this is your chance to share your ideas," she said.

This new strategy must showcase our City's outstanding reputation for liveability and productivity. It also needs to be rolled out in a visible, tangible way that meets short, medium and long-term goals, and above all, unites our community.

The Coalition Government has launched a dedicated website www.planmelbourne.vic.gov.au, online forums and fact sheets around ten key themes including people, housing, transport, environment, economy, communities, freight, infrastructure, regional areas and peri-urban areas.

Mrs Victoria strongly encourages all those with great ideas to become involved.

The Coalition Government is working with local councils, industry and peak bodies to provide input to the development of a discussion paper.
